Abstract

The Security Dimension in the Saudi Yemeni Relations on 2000-2010
By
Abdullah saad Abdullah Al tamammi
Mu'tah University, 2010

This study aims to analyze the impact of the security dimension as a parameter in the Saudi-Yemeni relations. It focuses on the historical roots and the most important stages of its development. In addition, it deals with the factors affecting the relations between the two neighboring countries and the impact of Jeddah Treaty in 2000 on the relations between the as well as a case study (Houthis war) in 2009. Security factor forms an axis in the Saudi-Yemeni relations since the emergence of them. Hence, the problematic posed by the study: Does the security factor forms a major determinant in the Saudi-Yemeni relations in the light of the changes in the domestic and regional issues in the Arabs Gulf region after 2000? In order to answer this question, the historical analytical approach is used.

The study concludes that Saudi Arabia deals with its relations with Yemen in a priority in which the efforts and attitudes are integrated to achieve security and stability in this vital region of the world; therefore, the Saudi leadership was aware of the importance of security of Yemen to Saudi Arabia as a strategic depth when it supports Yemen in its effort to end the Houthi armed rebellions. Moreover, leaving Yemen alone to face problems will not be beneficial for the stability and security of saudi in a long term. The study recommends that there is a need to link between the requirements of the domestic stability through the development and the requirements of regional stability, by preventing and resolving conflicts through peaceful means. Consequently, it imposes a geographical closeness and preventing interference between nations as well as strengthening the relationships to achieve peace and stability
